Summary

- BET gained 0.19% yesterday on high turnover and in line with major European indexes; the optimism born out of the announcement that QE will continue adds to the usual supportive seasonality witnessed by local stocks in Q4
- In line with equities, the leu strengthened marginally and the EUR/RON is trading below 4.45.
- Government securities yields edged down yesterday; the Treasury sold RON 700 mn in 7Y bonds at 5.04% and interest looked improved compared to the last few auctions.

BVB indexes finished mostly in the green and top gainers were the blue chips, as ROTX earned 0.4% yesterday, led by Transelectrica (+ 4.29%) and Erste Group Bank (+ 1.6%). Total market turnover was high at EUR 145.9 mn as the public offer of Fondul Proprietatea was recorded (EUR 135 mn). In Europe, equities inched up as well, as the euro – zone's trade surplus for September came out higher than expected, pointing to the fact that the economic outlook is improving. Today, the German ZEW index (November) will be released and consensus shows a pickup compared with the previous month, thereby reaffirming the positive outlook of the euro-zone.

In line with the boost seen by equities, the leu and its peers moved marginally up against the euro. The EUR/RON is currently trading below 4.45, born out of the positive sentiment of recent events, especially the perspective of a delay in tapering. Meanwhile, RON liquidity is thriving and money market rates have dipped substantially below the monetary policy rate. We see the appreciation potential of the leu as limited, especially since Q1 2014 is likely to bring back worries related to the end of QE.

Government securities yields edged marginally down yesterday, The Treasury managed to sell the planned amount of RON 700 mn in 7Y bonds, at an average accepted yield of 5.04%, lower than the one recorded at the last similar tended in Mid September (5.11%). However since September, the Central Bank cut the base rate by 50 bps. Nevertheless, interest seemed improved compared to the past few auctions and bid to cover ratio stood at 1.9.
