Summary

- Markets started the week optimistically, and most of them continued the up moves this morning.
- The rise in oil prices came to a halt; the dollar is strengthening versus the euro.
- The EZ's finance ministers will meet Greece's representatives on Friday; without an agreement, the country may default on its debts as early as in May.

China reduced its banks' required reserve ratio during the weekend; this move helped the key equity markets to significant gains after Friday's downward ride. The DAX advanced 1.7%, as all of its 30 constituents but Volkswagen made gains. The Nasdaq100 was another strong performer, with 1.5% gain. General Electric is prepared to sell its entire lending and leasing division to Wells Fargo, for USD 74 billion. The news made GE (-1%) the loser of the day within the Dow Jones. Rio Tinto and IBM reported poor figures for the first quarter, while L'Oreal's revenue surpassed the Q1 2014 data by 14.1%, and SAP's operating results jumped by 15%.

The rise in crude oil prices has stopped; the Brent crude fell near USD 62 by Monday noon (from Friday's high of 64.5 USD/barrel), and the WTI reversed from near 60 USD/barrel. Reportedly, Saudi Arabia's daily output may have been record high in April and the USA's reserves may have increased too, while there is no perceptible upturn on the demand side.

The dollar is strengthening – after Monday's weakening; the EUR/USD fell below 1.067 when Europe opened. The CHF has been appreciating against the euro (for quite a while), and the pair is at a three-month high, around 1.0245. As Friday's Eurogroup meeting is approaching, where Greece must present a convincing reform plan or else it defaults next month, the common European currency will probably be under selling pressure.

This morning the favourable market sentiment continued in Asia; the Nikkei225 upped by 1.4%, the Hang Seng rallied 2.5%. In Europe, all markets except Russia, Bulgaria and the Baltic states headed higher. The DAX jumped 1.3% higher in the first 15 minutes of trading.
