Summary

- The weekend summit of the Eurogroup ended successfully; the ESM bailout programme for Greece was approved. The EZ's leaders attached extremely tight conditions to the agreement.
- Benefiting from Friday's benign investor sentiment, the key indices of Europe and America closed with gains.
- On Friday Janet Yellen confirmed that the interest rate hikes would start this year, with gradual implementation.

The reform package submitted by Greece on Thursday evening includes savings measures worth EUR 13 billion, in return for which the Greek government expects EUR 53.5 billion financing by 2018. The proposals include VAT and other tax increases, curbing pension expenses and raising the retirement age, as well as privatization plans. International lenders found Greece's package satisfactory for negotiations. The weekend discussions have brought the positions about resolving the Greek crisis closer. The marathon talks, which ended this morning, reached agreement in all points. This morning the European Council's President Donald Tusk said that the eurozone leaders have unanimously accepted the ESM bailout plan for Greece, with significant reform measures and financial backing. They attached extremely strict conditions to the agreement, which poses the question how long the government led by Syriza and PM Alexis Tsipras can keep their head above water. Participants failed to agree on one important issue, the 50-billion-euro privatization package. Western Europe's major stock markets responded to the favourable development with gains.

Fuelled by the favourable reports from Greece, investor sentiment was positive in Europe on Friday. Buyers' camp was also bolstered by the stabilization of Chinese markets. London's Footsie upped by 1.4%, and Germany's DAX added 2.9%, and France's CAC40 surged 3% on Friday.

US trading was likewise optimistic on Friday. Greece's reform proposal boosted investors' confidence, as an agreement became likely again. All of the key benchmarks added more than 1% on Friday: the Dow and the S&P both rose by 1.2%, and the NASDAQ100 closed 1.6% higher. All of the S&P's sector indices ended in positive territory. Technology was the strongest sector index (+1.6%). Consumer discretioneries also fared well, the sub-index rose by 1.5%.

Speaking at an event in Cleveland on Friday, the Fed's chair Janet Yellen confirmed that the first interest rate hikes may come this year. However, she also reiterated that the weaknesses of the labour market allow only step by step pace at the outset. The Fed's chair also pointed out that course of economic growth and inflation remained highly uncertain, and unexpected developments may delay or accelerate the first interest rate hikes.
