Summary

- The RON was unchanged compared to the EUR on Wednesday.
- The MoF offers to sell RON 700 mn debt to primary dealers on today's auction.
- Romania's CA deficit amounted to EUR 585 mn in the period of January-August 2015.
- The BET marginally climbed higher yesterday (+0.1%).

The pessimistic sentiment continued to linger on Europe's and USA's financial markets yesterday, as concerns over global economic outlook did note fade. In Europe, investors might worry about weak industrial production data, while in the USA, among others the Fed's Beige Book pointed to some slowing signs in the economic activity. In such circumstances, the EUR/USD climbed higher toward 1.15. At the same time, the EUR/RON remained in its tight range, similarly to the previous few days, while in the CEE region, the HUF was the winner of the day, as it could strengthen versus the euro.

Government securities' fixing rates moved in different directions ahead of today's T-bill auction, where the Ministry of Finance aims to raise RON 700 mn. The benchmark yields at the short and medium term maturities inched up by 1 bp yesterday.

The National Bank of Romania released balance of payment and external debt statistics yesterday. According to the report, Romania's current account deficit stood at EUR 585 mn in the first eight months of the year, which is significantly lower than a year earlier (EUR -1.1 bn). Nevertheless, the 12M rolling deficit marginally increased (from 0% of GDP in July to 0.1% in August), as the gap between the export and import of goods has widened somewhat, first of all due to the stronger domestic demand. Simultaneously, the volume of net FDI inflows continued to increase, reaching EUR 2.3 bn since the end of last year, while the country's total external debt fell by almost EUR 5 bn.

The BVB indices showed little variation yesterday, after the highest gain was only 0.3%, registered by the BET's energy and related utilities index of BET-NG. On the other hand, the BET-FI slipped 0.3%, as five out of its six components closed in the red. Equities' total turnover was relatively low (RON 19 mn, out of which RON 12.6 mn came from trades with the shares of SNG). The main European and US stock indices ended lower yesterday.
