Summary

- Global equity markets saw unenthusiastic investors on Wednesday.
- Today's meeting of the ECB's monetary council is likely to decide on further stimulus measures.
- The eurozone's November inflation figure undershot expectations.

In Wednesday's unsupportive sentiment on Europe's equity markets, the DAX eased 0.6%, the CAC40 shed 0.2%, the Stoxx600 almost stagnated; only the FTSE100 rose by 0.4%. The most important market-moving event today is the ECB Monetary Council's rate decision and the subsequent news conference. The ECB is expected to announce further stimulus measures but analysts hold different views about its form. The ECB may further trim its benchmark interest rate, or step up the volume of its asset purchases. Opinions about the expected market reaction also diverge. Communication in recent weeks raised market actors' expectations for central bank's new package, which are bolstered by Wednesday's release of lower-than-expected inflation. A set of measures that is not convincing enough may cause disappointment.

The key stock indices of America were also ailing: the Dow was down 0.9%, the S&P500 dropped 1.1%, the NASDAQ100 shed 0.6%, and the Russel2000 lost 1%. JP Morgan has signed a P2P agreement with OnDeck Capital, a lending company, to use their platform for selling loans. The pilot programme, to start in January, will offer maximum USD 250,000 loans mostly to small-sized businesses. The news sent OnDeck's share price sky-rocketing 27.6% in after-hours trading.

Asia's markets closed mixed this morning. The Hang Seng dropped 0.4%, the Sensex slipped 0.6%, while the SSEC went up 1.1%, and the Nikei225 barely changed.

The EUR lost 0.19% against the USD and 0.9% versus the CHF. The GBP gained 0.88% from the USD. This morning the euro's ailing (against the USD) continued, ahead of the ECB's rate decision.

The Brent oil fell 3.3% yesterday and traded around 43 USD/barrel this morning.
