Summary

- In Friday's unenthusiastic trading in Europe and America the key indices lost 2-3%.
- Oil prices sank deeper: the WTI shed 1.7% and the Brent fell 6% on Friday.
- · Asia's markets were rather gloomy this morning.

Europe's key indices opened with moderate optimism on Friday as the slumping oil prices, the concerns about China and the weaker-than-expected US macro statistics generated strong selling pressure throughout Europe. The Footsie (-1.9%), the CAC40 (-2.4%), and the DAX (-2.5%) all closed in the red on Friday. Raw material and energy names suffered the most painful losses. BHP Billiton was one of the biggest losers, diving 6.8%, partly due to the management's announcement to write down USD 7.2 billion on the value of its American shale assets. Markets are increasingly expecting central banks to take action, fuelling hopes that this week's ECB meeting will announce stimulus measures.

Pessimism ruled US trading too. Worries about China's economic growth, the plunging oil price, the weaker-than-expected macro data, and corporate news all bolstered the selling side. The Dow closed 2.4% lower, the S&P eased 2.2%, and the NASDAQ100 fell 3.1%. All of the S&P's sector indices ended in negative territory, with the financial services index seeing the largest fall (-3.2%). The energy component sank 2.9%, and technology contracted by 2.8%. Citigroup's quarterly report has beaten expectations in terms of revenue and EPS; yet investors hammered Citi shares 6.4% down. Neither did other US big banks have a good day on Friday: the Bank of America and Wells Fargo tumbled 3.5% each, and JP Morgan slipped 2%. Intel nose-dived more than 9%, owing to disappointing earnings released on the previous day. Its earnings per share (USD 0.70) surpassed expectations (0.63), but its data centre services division, which has a significant growth potential, posted slower growth, disappointing investors. Other tech giants – Microsoft (-4%), Google (-2.9%), Apple (-2.4%), and Facebook (3.5%) – also suffered losses on Friday. Today US markets will be closed, due to Martin Luther King Day.

Oil prices fell deeper on Friday, making a brief visit below USD 30. The WTI closed at USD 30.68, 1.7% lower than on Thursday. The Brent oil failed to climb back above USD 30; it traded at USD 29.13 when US markets closed, 6% lower than on the previous day. The oversupplied market would see further pressure if Iran boosted its production; which is no longer unlikely, given that some of the sanctions against it were lifted. Iran is planning to increase its exports by 500,000 barrels/day.

In this morning's unsupportive trading sentiment in Asia, Japan's stock indices eased 1%. In China, the Hang Seng dropped 0.5% and the Shanghai Composite advanced 0.5%.

Retail sales in December slightly undershot expectations; the headline index sank 0.1% month/month, in line with analysts' forecasts. What worried economists was the 1.1% drop in fuel retail sales, despite the 3.8% slump in fuel prices. Apparently, the record mild December and the cheaper oil prices fail to encourage Americans to buy more fuel.
