Summary

- Sentiment was mixed on Friday
- The finance minister of Kuvait expects the oil price between 50-60 dollar in 2017. Iraq supports the OPEC agreement but does not want to reduce its own output
- In a few week time banks could leave London due to the Brexit
- The USD appreciated against the EUR

Sentiment on the international markets was mixed on Friday. Among the leading European indices the DAX gained a bit, but the CAC40 declined slightly. The US indices closed in a small minus (except the Nasdaq100).

According to the director of the British Banking Association, the banks in Britain could start to leave the country in a few week time due to the Brexit. The trade volume of the British financial services is GBP 20 billon annually. According to the Oliver Wyman Advisory firm, due to the Brexit the trade volume with the EU could decline by 40-50% and could negatively effect 31-35 thousands jobs.

In Spain a long-waited political agreement is in the pipe line. Spain's socialist party signalled that withdraw from the upcoming elections and therefore Mariano Rajoy could start his second term in power. With the end of the political gridlock investment sentiment could turn positive for Spain.

According to the finance minister of Kuvait, oil prices could be between 50-60 US dollar in 2017. Kuvait want to increase its production from 2.8 million barrel a day to 4 million. According to the oil minister of Iraq the September OPEC agreement about the restriction of oil production could not be done in a way which could reduce his countries oil production. In Friday's trading the price of oil increased only slightly.

The dollar appreciated against the euro by 0.4% The euro depreciated against the major FX pairs.

Sentiment was positive in the Asian markets in the early hours. The Nikkei increased by 0.3% and the Hang Seng by 0.4%.
