Summary

- Romania's unemployment rate stood at a post-crisis low (5.8%), October's data revealed.
- In Monday's trading session, the pessimism returned on global financial markets.
- Stocks finished mostly in negative territory; the BET lost 0.7%.

The National Institute of Statistics published market labour figures this morning. According to the latest data, Romania's unemployment rate stood at only 5.8% in October; the figures for the previous two months were revised downward as well. The latest level is only 0.3 percentage points higher than the record low of 5.5% registered in 2008, pointing to a rapidly tightening labour market. Today economic sentiment and consumer confidence indicators will see the light of day.

Yesterday pessimism returned on global financial markets on the back of a crowded economic calendar for this week. There will be several important events, like the OPEC meeting about a potential freeze in crude oil production on Wednesday, as well as the Italian referendum planned for 4 December. The rejection of the proposed reforms may trigger significant political and economic uncertainties in the Mediterranean country. Nonetheless, trading will be closed in Romania on the following two days due to national holidays.

The CEE region's currencies changed mixed against the euro yesterday, with the RON ending marginally stronger, while the EUR/USD climbed somewhat higher, after the US dollar showed a sharp rally earlier in November, fuelled by Donald Trump's presidential election victory.

European stock markets were dragged down by the slump in Italian banking shares, reflecting the rising concerns about a potential rejection of the proposed constitutional reforms on Sunday's referendum. Simultaneously, US equities dipped 0.3%-0.6% lower, as investors became more cautious. The unfavourable sentiment on global stock markets had spillover effects in Bucharest too. As a result, the BET shed 0.7%, led by the shares of the BRD (-2.0%) and OMW Petrom (-1.1%).
