MONEY MARKET

Summary

- After the national holidays, the EUR/RON started Friday's session at around 4.51.
- Wednesday's OPEC production cut deal sent crude oil futures above USD 50 per barrel.
- Romania's economic sentiment indicator rose to 105 in November, up from 104 a month earlier.
- Ahead of this week-end's Italian referendum, traders were cautious on global equity markets yesterday.

Ahead of the national holidays on 30 November and 1 December, the EUR/RON climbed as high as 4.52, but finished below 4.51 on Tuesday due to some late evening trades. In the past two days, the Polish zloty and the Hungarian forint came under some weakening pressure on slightly rising risk aversion. This morning, the EUR/RON is traded around 4.51.

On the external front, probably the most crucial market-moving event was the OPEC deal in Wien, after the largest oil producing countries reached an agreement on scaling back crude production by more than one million barrels a day from the current level of 33.8 mn. The news sent oil futures above USD 50 per barrel. Today US payroll statistics will be in focus.

Romania's economic sentiment indicator paints a favourable picture about the country's perspectives, climbing for the second consecutive month in November, to 105 points. Last month's improvement primarily was helped by strengthening consumer confidence, which advanced 2.6 points. Today the National Bank of Romania will publish statistics on FX reserves for the end of November.

On Tuesday, the BVB's indices registered nice gains, with the BET adding almost 0.7%, after the shares of OMW Petrom surged 2.2%. Rather downbeat trading mood ruled global equity markets yesterday, as investors were cautious ahead of Italy's referendum. Nonetheless in the USA, Dow Jones was able to record a modest 0.4% gain.
