Global Daily Report

Summary

- In Friday's low-volatility trading session, stock markets closed mixed
- Counter-intuitively, neither Janet Yellen nor Mario Draghi talked about monetary policy in Jackson Hole
- The EUR gained 1% against the USD; oil and precious metal prices inched up on Friday.

In Friday's low-volatility trading session, global stock markets closed mixed. In Europe, the DAX and the FTSE 100 edged up 0.1%, while the CAC40 slipped 0.2%. In the USA, the S&P500 crept 0.2% higher, and the NASDAQ100 shed 0.2%. This morning, Asia closed a gloomy session, with the Nikkei slipping 0.1% and China's SSE dropping 1.5%.

Friday's most important event was the Jackson Hole symposium where Janet Yellen (Fed) and Mario Draghi (ECB) made keynote speeches. But, to everybody's surprise, neither central bank heads gave away too much on monetary policy issues. Instead, President Draghi defended the post-crisis tightness in financial regulation, and highlighted the importance of free trade. After the speeches, the USD retreated 1% against the EUR and 0.2% versus the yen.

In Friday's trading, oil and precious metal prices rose by 0.5-0.7%. Because of a hurricane in Texas, oil rigs and refineries in the Mexican Gulf were closed.
