Global Daily Report

GLOBAL DAILY REPORT - 26 SEPTEMBER 2017

Summary

- Advanced economies' stock markets dropped yesterday as North Korea fears continue to weigh on risky assets' prices.
- After the Kurdish referendum, Turkey is threatening to disrupt oil flows; the Brent jumped 4%.

In Monday's sourish sentiment in Europe's stock markets, most indices edged down. The Stoxx600 index oscillated in a very narrow range, ending the day 0.2% higher. Following Sunday's election, there was not much enthusiasm in Frankfurt, where the DAX gained just a few points.

America's key benchmarks ended the day in the red, with the Dow and the S&P losing 0.2% each. The technology segment saw much sharper falls; the NASDAQ Composite fell 0.9%, and the NASDAQ100 dropped 1.1%. Of the S&P's sector indices, energy, utilities, and consumer staples grew powerfully, unlike technology and health care. Apparently, investors shunned the FANG group on Monday: Facebook lost 4.5%, Netflix plunged 4.7%, while Apple and Google closed nearly 1% down each.

The tension between North Korea and the USA is not abating. China is to impose new trade sanction against North Korea. The geopolitical tension left its mark on Tuesday's trading in Asia, where all the important benchmarks extended their losses. Taiwan's Apple suppliers have fallen sharply (by 5-10% in recent days) since the new iPhone series came out and were met with mixed reactions.

After the elections in Germany the euro weakened, driving the EUR/USD 0.8% down and the EUR/GBP 0.6% lower. The USD firmed 0.3% against the GBP on Monday. The angst about North Korea somewhat strengthened demand for safe haven assets: the CHF gained 0.2% and the JPY appreciated 0.3% against the USD.

On commodity markets, oil prices jumped higher yesterday. The Brent surged 4% after Turkey threatened to block petroleum exports from Iraq's Kurdistan region, in response to Monday's referendum on Kurdish independence in Baghdad. The WTI crude grew 3% on Monday.

Today's important releases include US housing price statistics. Janet Yellen is to make a speech in the evening.
