Summary

- All eyes on the NBR; Romania's central bank will keep its monetary policy meeting today.
- The NBR organises a repo auction today; the transaction is set to ease pressure on interbank interest rates.
- In September, Romania's FX reserves decreased by EUR 1.64 bn.
- Producer prices picked up in August.
- The leu firmed 0.2% compared to the euro yesterday.

Given the sharp increases of ROBOR interest rates, triggered by the dry up of the liquidity surplus on the interbank market and supported by fundamental factors too, today all eyes will be on the NBR's policy meeting, as well as on the press conference of central bank governor Mr Isarescu. Despite the recent large movements of ROBOR rates, we think that the NBR will keep the policy rate unchanged at 1.75%. A corridor narrowing is not our base scenario, either, but the comments of Mr Isarescu could be precious in forming expectations about the policy outlook.

This morning, the NBR announced a repo auction in order to inject liquidity into the market. This transaction is set to ease pressure on ROBOR interest rates.

In September, Romania's FX reserves decreased to EUR 33.3 bn, down from EUR 35.0 bn a month earlier. Among others, the reserves were dragged down by a repayment of foreign currency debt in value of EUR 1,385 mn.

Industrial producer prices picked up in August, pointing to 4.1% YoY advance, the NIS said this morning. In July, the producer price index (PPI) added 3.0% YoY. The acceleration mainly was the result of surging energy prices, but several core items also registered faster growth rates. The upward trajectory of the PPI may support further the inflationary process of consumer prices.

On the back of the concerns sparked by the Catalan referendum, Europe's common currency weakened around 0.7% against the greenback on Monday. Meanwhile, Romania's leu also gained ground against the euro (almost 0.2%), helped by higher interest rates too.

The majority of Europe's key stock indices benefited from the depreciation of the euro. Germany's export-heavy DAX index climbed 0.6%. At the same time, US stocks also finished in the green, while Romania's BET slightly increased.
