Global Daily Report

Summary

- Favourable corporate earnings figures bolstered stock markets' growth on Tuesday
- The MNB considers launching new unconventional tools to ease monetary conditions

Supported by reassuring quarterly earnings reports, most stock markets closed higher on Tuesday – nearly all leading stock indices ended with gains. In the corporate world, the earnings figures of Caterpillar and 3M beat expectations. America's carmakers also fared well: GM and Fiat Chrysler both reported improving margins. Investors also appreciated the contraction in GM's unsold vehicles. Fiat Chrysler's CEO, Sergio Marchionne said his company could pay back its loans by end-2018 and generate EUR 5 billion cash flow. In contrast with industrial companies' good performance, AT&T came up with more humble results, with a sharper-than-expected fall in subscriber numbers. Besides, the chipmaker AMD also fell owing to a forecast on shrinking revenue in the fourth quarter.

The uncertainties surrounding Donald Trump's tax package have mounted as two Republican senators fiercely criticized the President's policy. Republicans have a mere two-vote majority in Senate, so a rift within the Grand Old Party does not bode well.

Tuesday's rate decision of the MNB's Monetary Council left monetary conditions in place. But in a new element of the subsequent statement, the MNB said it considered the deployment of new unconventional tools.

The dollar weakened trivially against the euro, but the dollar index of the six key currencies slightly firmed on Tuesday. The greenback was influenced by opposing forces: on the one hand, the uncertainty about Donald Trump's tax package weakened it. On the other hand, Republican legislators proposed a renowned monetary policy professional, John Taylor as the Fed's next chair. News that the hawkish Taylor's chances improved benefited the US dollar and raised US government bond yields.

On the commodities market, oil and industrial metal prices climbed higher while precious metal prices dropped.

The October readings of Markit's Purchasing Managers' Index painted a rosy picture. The gauge on the USA surpassed expectations, with the manufacturing index hitting nine-month high. The eurozone's manufacturing confidence index also climbed to a level unseen for 6.5 years.

Today's important publications include the Ifo sentiment index, the UK's GDP data for the third quarter, as well as the US housing starts and factory goods orders figures. Today's meeting of the Bank of Canada is expected to hold its base rate unchanged at 1%, while the Central Bank of Brazil is projected to cut interest rates by 75 bps (from 8.25%) as inflation fell below the central bank's target.

The earnings reports of Coca-Cola and Visa, as well as American aerospace industry (Boeing, General Dynamics, and Northrop Grumman) are worth keeping an eye on.
